

"FROM UNDER THE BRIDGES OF AMERICA"

Homeless Poetry Anthology Book

Benefiting The Homeless

A collection by contributing poets from across the USA

"...The contributions to this remarkable collection embody, not anger, not rage: instead, resignation, endurance, resilience, and something like hope, the quality least associated, officially, with the homeless..."

— William Murchison

Nationally Syndicated Columnist, Author, Professor

"...And perhaps worst of all, all too frequently, the homeless have been without a voice, without an advocate in our great prosperous nation that eats the poor and defenseless and spits them out again as otherwise worthless and useless. – Until now..."

— Robert Cooperman

Poet and Author

"...There is a kind of dignity here we can all understand. We are all one step away from falling – but also one step away from being lifted up. This book is filled with hope – hope, humanity, and yes, a kind of holiness..."

— Alan Birkelbach

2005 Texas State Poet Laureate

Co-Authors, Judy and J. Darrell Kirkley, humanitarians, have compiled a collection of poems on homelessness from talented, award winning and caring poets into this poignant anthology; to express heartfelt awareness of the needs of homeless people across America.
